Cinderella

Ella was a kind and beautiful girl. Her mother died and this made her very sad.

Her father married again.
His new wife and her daughters were very unkind to her.

They treated her badly.
They made her clean the floors, cook the meals and wash the clothes.

One day Ella spent the whole day cleaning the fireplace.

“Just look at her!
She’s covered with cinders!
Let’s call her Cinderella!”
laughed one of the sisters.

Once the family was invited to a ball at the palace. The Prince was looking for a wife.

Cinderella was not allowed to go. She was made to work very hard.

Cinderella sat on the doorstep and cried.

All of a sudden, a fairy stood before her.

“Don’t cry, Cinderella, you too shall go to the ball,” she said.

“Now bring me a pumpkin, six mice and a fat rat,” said the fairy.
Cinderella obeyed at once.

The fairy tapped the
and it turned into a beautiful coach.

The six mice turned into fine white horses and the rat became a coachman. Cinderella's dress changed into a silver gown, and on her feet were lovely glass slippers.

“Oh, thank you!” cried Cinderella.

“Hurry now,” said the fairy. “Remember to leave the ball before the clock strikes twelve.”

Cinderella was the most beautiful young lady at the ball. The Prince danced with her all night.

At midnight, Cinderella
One of her glass slippers fell off.

When the Prince went to look for her, he only found her slipper. So he decided to search for the lady who had lost the slipper.

He looked for her in every town and village. But the slipper did not fit anyone.

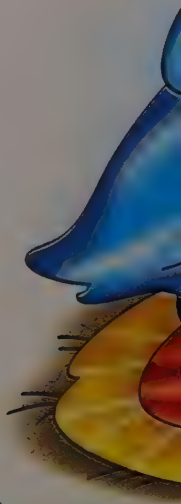

Finally, the Prince came to Cinderella's house.

“Let me try it!” cried one of the sisters.

“No! I want to try it first,” said the other.

They pulled and pushed but they could not make the slipper fit.

“Please may I try it?” said Cinderella.

When she tried it, the slipper fitted her perfectly!

So Cinderella married the Prince and they lived happily ever after.
